G7 Summit at Schloss Elmau

It's definitely the calm before the storm in Krün, the Upper Bavarian municipality set to host the G7 summit on 7 and 8 June 2015. Then, life as the locals know it will be turned on its head for two days when the leaders of the world's top industrialized nations gather here, on this occasion without Russia. German Chancellor Angela Merkel will be hosting the meeting at the luxury Schloss Elmau hotel, where hotelier Dietmar Müller-Elmau has been planning the politicians' visit for weeks: How can he offer his guests the best service possible? Who's going in which suite? And what's going to be on the menu? The region's infrastructure is also being improved, and there are building sites everywhere.

Made in Germany reports from the G7 summit in Upper Bavaria. The magazine is there to see the final preparations being made at the luxury hotel, and presents the region's innovative companies and other economic highlights.

Tracking the Climate

Everyone is talking about climate change. But what actually happens on the ground when a natural system is suddenly tipped off balance? This is a question that led Dutch science journalist and adventurer Bernice Notenboom to undertake a journey around the globe – from Greenland to South Africa, from the Amazon to the Himalayas and across Europe. In some of the regions worst affected by climate change, she meets concerned scientists and unsettled residents. But she also meets people who are tackling the resulting problems competently and courageously, like the shrewd vintners in Alsace, or researchers working in the Black Forest. Watch the two-part documentary Tracking the Climate on DW.

Data Privacy in Iceland

Exactly five years ago, the Icelandic parliament passed a package of laws that turned the island into a secure data center: Since then, electronic data have been hosted on the island, well out of the reach of hackers and any state authority. Several data centers have been built since the laws were enacted, and these are also used by foreign companies to store sensitive data. But this secure data haven is now under threat. The magazine Shift explains why.

Painters with Vision

Their pictures immortalized Martin Luther and his Reformation: Lucas Cranach the Elder (1472–1553) and Lucas Cranach the Younger (1515–1586) are among the most renowned painters of the 16th century. The family's entire oeuvre is estimated at around 5,000 works, of which 1,500 examples still survive around the world to this day. To mark the 500th birthday of Lucas Cranach the Younger, many exhibitions are being shown this year on the life and work of the father-son pair. Arts.21 shows the extent of the Cranach's vision.

Refreshing Jewel on the Rhine

The French philosopher Voltaire enthused about a “sanctuary of calm,” when the poet Heinrich von Kleist visited the city of Karlsruhe, he found it to be “clear and full of light.” This is understandable when you bear in mind that just a few decades previously, there had been a dense forest on the very same spot. It was 1715 when the Margrave Charles III William had the trees felled to build a new residence. His plan for the city was inspired by the solar system with streets fanning out from the center, where naturally his palace was located. To this day, Karlsruhe retains the charm of a Baroque new town – manageable in size, quirky and always with a surprise up its sleeve. Discover Germany explores the city on the Rhine that’s celebrating its 300th birthday this year.

IN GOOD SHAPE

Anti-Aging

We’re all growing older – but no one wants to be sick and frail in old age. Ideally, we will still be fit, healthy and mobile even when we’re at an advanced stage of our lives. Nowadays, “healthy aging” is the motto guiding research into reputable anti-aging medicine, which is primarily focused on how typical age-related complaints and illnesses can be avoided. Nutrition, exercise and stress avoidance are key factors here. Supplementary micronutrients and hormones are just some of the other ways we can stay youthful. And those who feel healthy are going to want to look younger too. Everyone’s talking about wrinkle busting treatments such as botox and hyaluronic acid these days – and more and more people are choosing to go under the knife for aesthetic reasons alone. In Good Shape explores what we can do to stay young, even when we’re old.

DOCUMENTARY

Playful World

Wherever you look, everyone is playing games: At home, in the subway, during their lunch break – on their computer, tablet or smartphone. And with an enthusiasm that’s mostly missing in everyday life, or in the workplace. Experts from a wide spectrum of fields now want to tap this creative potential. The concept is called “gamification,” a playful approach to tedious tasks could motivate people to do things they would otherwise find boring. The documentary Playful World explains how.

EUROMAXX

Royal Europe

The five-part Euromaxx series “Royal Europe” kicks off with the most beautiful footage of the wedding of Prince Carl Philip of Sweden and Sofia Hellqvist. For one week, the magazine profiles Europe’s most important royal families. There’s already a new generation on the throne in the Netherlands and Spain, with the royal couples Willem-Alexander and Máxima and Felipe and Letizia respectively. But are the new royals also instigating change?
