Germany's Coastlines HD

Do you like white sandy beaches? Are you interested in port towns with a long and colorful history? Would you like to know more about the longest stretch of tidal flatlands in the world?

Germany's Coastlines along the North Sea and Baltic Sea offer more than 1,000 kilometers of beach, extraordinary landscapes and unparalleled habitats. There are beautiful old towns that became prosperous and powerful as members of the Hanseatic League engaged in international trade.

Germany's Coastlines look stunning from the air. We follow the rugged North Sea coast from Emsland in the west to the fashionable island of Sylt. We trace the Baltic shore from Flensburg near Denmark to the island of Usedom on the Polish border.

Germany's Coastlines not only explore the landscapes and seascapes, it also profiles people who have found contentment by the sea and who cannot imagine living anywhere else. From the shrimp fisherman who plies the dangerous North Sea as one of the last practitioners of an ancient craft, to the "professional Viking" who gives visitors to the Baltic a flavor of the legendary city of Haithabu.

The programs were filmed with a Cineflex high-definition aerial camera system. Originally developed for reconnaissance purposes and top secret, the Cineflex is today regarded as the best helicopter camera in the world.
