Coming Home – 45 Min. HD

What is it like for a person to return to his roots, to go back to the country of his childhood and youth, a country he left years ago for a life in a foreign place? How has life changed for the family and friends he left behind? What memories are triggered by the experience? What has changed after all these years? What is the true meaning of home? These are all questions examined in the series Coming Home – 45 Min.

01 A Journey with Nazir Peroz through Afghanistan

Also available: 60 min. version in English, German, Spanish | 58 4812-02

Computer science and developing nations – these are his specialist subjects. Nazir Peroz, who was born in Afghanistan, heads the Center for International and Intercultural Communication at Berlin's Technical University. His aim is to advance the process of establishing an IT system in his home country. Four times a year, the computer scientist travels to the university cities he's working with: Kabul, Mazar-i-Sharif and Herat. Terrorist attacks and hostilities are part of everyday life here. But Nazir Peroz does not allow that to stand in his way.

02 A Journey with Saruul Fischer through Mongolia

Although she has lived in Germany since she was a young child, fashion designer Saruul Fischer has never forgotten her native Mongolia. In fact, her yearning for her childhood home has inspired new business ideas: She has clothing made out of the finest cashmere wool in small workshops in Ulan Bator, and sells them in Germany through her fashion label Edelziege. Saruul Fischer regularly returns to Mongolia to savor a traditional way of life there that might not exist for much longer. How does she see the changes occurring in Mongolia? Saruul Fischer shares with us her thoughts on her former home.
