Global Ideas

Melting polar caps, devastating hurricanes, and rising sea levels. The changes ascribed to climate change are disheartening to say the least. Our series Global Ideas features people across the world who are pursuing innovative projects to counter global warming.

To reduce greenhouse gases, maintain biodiversity, provide food for thought, and promote effective action – these are the goals of the projects we profile. We present initiatives that are exemplary in character and creative in approach.

Each show has four reports. All the projects are “best practice” models, featuring ideas worthy of emulation.

India – Rescuing Wild Animals

Every year during the monsoon season, rains flood parts of India’s Assam region, leaving a lot of wild animals injured or abandoned. At the ‘Centre for Wildlife Rehabilitation and Conservation’ they are cared for until they can be re-released into the wild.

Zambia – A Home for Chimpanzees

Life is dangerous for chimpanzees in the Congo. Poachers and bush meat traders have often destroyed entire communities. In neighboring Zambia, rescued chimps are given refuge and looked after in one of the world’s largest chimpanzee sanctuaries.

Panama – Kids Save the Mangroves

Protecting nature is taken seriously at a young age in the region around Las Lajas in southwestern Panama. School kids who call themselves the “Defensores del Manglar El Maria” – the defenders of the El Maria mangrove forest – are already deeply committed to saving their environment.

Niger – Protecting Giraffes

Niger is one of the poorest country’s in the world. The average life expectancy is 15 years. In the Kouré reserve, not far from the capital of Niamey, giraffes provide locals a way to supplement their incomes.
